

MASQ #1 Extemp Packet

Prelims

Will a recent coup in Guinea-Bissau signal a renewed wave of political unrest in West Africa?

Will the Wang Fuk Court fire be the impetus for a renewed effort to end Hong Kong's special political status?

Will recent elections in Honduras shift the nation closer to America's foreign policy?

Is President Zelenskyy at risk of losing his job following recent anticorruption investigations against members of his inner circle?

Will increasing Chinese support for the military government of Myanmar lead to a defeat for pro-democracy rebels in the nation's civil war?

Could a partition of Sudan between the central government and the RSF be the only viable path left for a quick peace?

Is Airbus on the verge of experiencing their own crisis of confidence following major recalls of their A320 line?

Is Senegal on the verge of challenging the IMF's power to influence economic policy in exchange for financial aid?

Will President Trump's recent attacks against autopen usage by the Biden administration undermine the power of all American executive orders?

Will the loss of rural healthcare access become a potent talking point for Democrats in 2026?

Will TPS as an instrument of American foreign policy come to an end under the Trump administration?

Is ordering an investigation against Senator Mark Kelly a good move by Pete Hegseth to bolster his standing as Secretary of Defense?

Will the ongoing peace efforts by the US to end the Russo-Ukrainian War be seen as genuine, or simply appeasement to prevent future conflict by Russia?

How can the Department of Labor encourage liberal hiring practices by American companies to curb increasing economic anxiety?

In one word, what will the economic outlook for the United States look like in 2026?

Elims

How can African nations compel western companies to stop using conflict minerals in their products?

Will Kyrgyzstan's recent parliamentary elections result in a more authoritarian nation under President Japarov?

How can South American nations intercede to reduce tensions between Venezuela and the United States?

Is Pope Leo XIV first foreign visit a sign of things to come with his foreign policy as leader of the Catholic Church?

Does East Timor remain a potent cautionary tale about global indifference towards the self-determination of former colonial territories?

Should the international community be more worried about increasing attacks by armed groups against Kurdistan?

Has Canada found the best path to make their economy America proof following recent strong GDP growth?

Should the international community clamp down on the use of flags of convenience for shipping purposes?

Will the pardoning of Juan Orlando Hernandez by the Trump administration be seen as an attack on the democratic principles of Honduras?

How will the lessons learned from the crash of UPS Flight 2976 impact domestic cargo flight company operations?

Should the end of the filibuster be considered not as a political gambit, but a necessity to preserve the democratic ideals of the United States?

Is it time for the GOP to rethink their approach to anti-trust enforcement following a year of major consolidation of economic power?

Will the resumption of nuclear testing by the United States complicate its foreign policy regarding nonproliferation?

Is it time for the US to begin easing tariffs to promote greater economic cooperation against China?

Are rural states prepared for job shifts caused by increasing consolidation by food production companies?